Takeaways from Shenzhen NDR

Maintain Buy and TP of HK$5.00 At the post-results investor meetings we held last week in Shenzhen, most investors agreed that LS is a quality stock and its valuation is cheap at 6.7x ex-net cash FY16E P/E, but said they had found it difficult to accumulate given its thin trading volume. Key areas of interest included the use of its HK$637m net cash, the outlook for FY16, control of operating expenses amid the soft retail market, and the breakdown of e-commerce revenue. We like the company's above-peer revenue contribution from e-commerce (targeted at mid-teen in FY16 vs peers' low to mid singledigit in the last financial year), which should help it to improve its OP margin and could serve as a re-rating catalyst. We forecast LS will post an 11% CAGR in core profit in FY16-17. Trading at 9.7x FY16E P/E, LS's valuation is undemanding compared to Belle and C.Banner's 14x P/E. Our TP of HK$5.00 is based on 13x FY16E P/E (9.5x FY16E P/E previously), still a 10% discount to peers. Potential catalyst: in-depth co-operation with third party e-commerce platforms.

Use of cash pile The company's cash and bank balances (mainly RMB denominated) are deposited in bank accounts with maturities of less than one year. The company is interested in acquiring an international footwear brand; however, management is taking a cautious approach to this given concerns about legal issues and the power of labor unions.

FY16 outlook Management believes 10%+ revenue growth is a reasonable estimate, driven by its targets for 12% store growth, low single-digit SSSG and a 15% revenue contribution from e-commerce (vs 10% in FY15). While market sentiment on ladies footwear is still weak, management targets a better SSSG in 2HFY16 driven by a new image for its 2015 winter products, helped by its Italian employees recruited in late 2014.

Operating expense control Rental (concession fee and shop rental) and staff costs accounted for 47.7% of total revenue in FY15. Given rising wages and a steady concession fee, investors are concerned about de-leveraging pressure amid a soft footwear market. Management targets to increase the revenue contribution from ecommerce in order to be less dependent on physical stores. In addition, the company will continue to maintain a very efficient store network (more than 90% of stores are profitable).

E-commerce revenue breakdown About 70%/30% of its e-commerce revenue came from Le Saunda/CNE in FY15. The company has been consolidating its e-commerce distribution network from more than ten platforms to focusing on Tmall, Vip.com and JD. Vip.com is its second largest e-commerce channel after Tmall. In terms of brand ranking on Tmall by sales, Le Saunda was among the top four brands, while CNE was among the top 30 brands. The retail discount given on e-commerce channels is similar to that at its outlets, i.e. no more than 50% off on average. The company is looking for more in-depth co-operation with e-commerce platforms.

Downside risks The company fails to meet its e-commerce growth target; new store performance below expectation.
