1H18 results a strong beat driven by front-loaded property sales bookings

Maintain Hold on valuation; revising up NAV to HK$203/sh and TP to HK$135.9

Following a strong beat in 1H18, we revise our earnings forecast by 7%-9% for FY18-20E by adopting higher development margin assumptions overall. Correspondingly, we revise our DPS by 3.5-4.8% in FY18-20E (merely reflecting higher earnings but payout remains flat) and target price by 4% to HK$135.9 (HK$130.7). Nevertheless, in light of macro headwinds (upcoming rate hike and supply increase) and management guidance of little scope for imminent share buyback/ flat dividend payout, we see few near-term catalysts. As the current valuation is close to our assessed fair value, we maintain our Hold.

1H18 underlying earnings +37% YoY to HK$19,973mn, a strong beat

SHKP reported 1H18 underlying profit of HK$19,973mn, implying a 37% YoY surge from HK$14,608mn in 1H17, markedly beating our expectation. The strong beat was predominantly driven by property bookings being skewed in 1H (90:10 split between 1H:2H) as well as higher development margins. An interim dividend of HK$1.2/share was declared in 1H18, implying 9% YoY growth, reversing a moderating trend in dividend hikes in since 1H16.

Rental growth in overall portfolio accelerated in 1H18; driven by new projects

In 1H18, gross rental income (inclusive of associates/JV) rose by 6.5% YoY to HK$11,506mn, comprising of HK$9,011mn from HK (+4%), HK$2,140mn from China (+16% in HK$, +13% in Rmb) and HK$355mn from Singapore (+10%). Strong growth in the China portfolio was particularly attributable to new project completion on top of positive rental reversion. Overall growth momentum accelerated (1H18: 6.5%; FY17: 4%; FY16: 7%), with HK registering a slight acceleration to 4.3% in 1H18, vs. 2H17 at 3.2%/1H17 at 4.4%.

Development margins markedly improved by 7.7 percentage points to 40.1%

In addition to the front-loaded booking schedule in 1H18, another key reason for the strong 1H18 was the higher-than-expected development margins. In particular, operating profit margin for the Hong Kong portfolio saw a 5 percentage point expansion to 39.9% and that for the China portfolio saw an expansion by 19 percentage points to 43%.

HK landbank +6% to 55mn sf/China landbank -3% to 65mn sf in past 6 months

As of end-17, SHKP has total HK landbank of 55.1mn sf, of which 21.4mn sf was under development (up from 19.6mn in mid-17), implying 6% growth in the past six months, following three projects totaling 5.2mn sf being added. In particular, land-use conversion of Shap Sz Heung was completed with 4.8mn sf GFA. In China, total landbank fell by 3% to 65mn sf, of which 51mn sf was under development (down from 52.6mn in mid-17).

Target price of HK$135.9 is based on a sum-of-the-parts approach

Our target price is based on a sum-of-the-parts approach and implies a 2018E PE of 14x. We believe applying a 5-7x PE to HK property development and a 34% target discount to our estimated value of the respective investment property portfolio is appropriate in an ex-growth market. Risks: fluctuation in HK/China economies, adverse or favorable changes to interest rate trends and government policies. See page 4.

Valuation and risks

Our target price is based on the sum-of-the-part approach (previously target discount on overall NAV), which imply a 2018 PE of 14x. We believe applying a 5-7x PE to HK property development and a 34% target discount to our estimated value on the respective investment property portfolio is appropriate in an ex-growth market. For China property development, we believe applying 8x PE (on par to industry leaders with strong financial positions such as COLI and CR Land) is appropriate by considering the financial strength and profitability profile of Hong Kong developers. Such methodology is now our new valuation metric adopted across HK developers under our coverage.

Fluctuations in the Hong Kong economy may lead to higher/lower housing demand; An interest rate hike and continuous liquidity outflow may severely harm sentiment and demand in the property market. On the other hand, the property market may further strengthen if the low interest rate environment persists; Unexpected fluctuations in the Chinese economy could affect our forecasts; The Chinese government's measures may be stricter/looser than expected.

Macroeconomic fluctuations often account for most of the risks associated with exposures to instruments that promise to pay fixed or variable interest rates. For an investor who is long fixed-rate instruments (thus receiving these cash flows), increases in interest rates naturally lift the discount factors applied to the expected cash flows and thus cause a loss. The longer the maturity of a certain cash flow and the higher the move in the discount factor, the higher will be the loss. Upside surprises in inflation, fiscal funding needs, and FX depreciation rates are among the most common adverse macroeconomic shocks to receivers. But counterparty exposure, issuer creditworthiness, client segmentation, regulation (including changes in assets holding limits for different types of investors), changes in tax policies, currency convertibility (which may constrain currency conversion, repatriation of profits and/or liquidation of positions), and settlement issues related to local clearing houses are also important risk factors. The sensitivity of fixed-income instruments to macroeconomic shocks may be mitigated by indexing the contracted cash flows to inflation, to FX depreciation, or to specified interest rates – these are common in emerging markets. The index fixings may – by construction – lag or mis-measure the actual move in the underlying variables they are intended to track. The choice of the proper fixing (or metric) is particularly important in swaps markets, where floating coupon rates (i.e., coupons indexed to a typically short-dated interest rate reference index) are exchanged for fixed coupons. Funding in a currency that differs from the currency in which coupons are denominated carries FX risk. Options on swaps (swaptions) the risks typical to options in addition to the risks related to rates movements.

Derivative transactions involve numerous risks including market, counterparty default and illiquidity risk. The appropriateness of these products for use by investors depends on the investors' own circumstances, including their tax position, their regulatory environment and the nature of their other assets and liabilities; as such, investors should take expert legal and financial advice before entering into any transaction similar to or inspired by the contents of this publication. The risk of loss in futures trading and options, foreign or domestic, can be substantial. As a result of the high degree of leverage obtainable in futures and options trading, losses may be incurred that are greater than the amount of funds initially deposited – up to theoretically unlimited losses. Trading in options involves risk and is not suitable for all investors. Prior to buying or selling an option, investors must review the "Characteristics and Risks of Standardized Options", at <http://www.optionsclearing.com/about/publications/character-risks.jsp>. If you are unable to access the website, please contact your Deutsche Bank representative for a copy of this important document.

Participants in foreign exchange transactions may incur risks arising from several factors, including: (i) exchange rates can be volatile and are subject to large fluctuations; (ii) the value of currencies may be affected by numerous market factors, including world and national economic, political and regulatory events, events in equity and debt markets and changes in interest rates; and (iii) currencies may be subject to devaluation or government-imposed exchange controls, which could affect the value of the currency. Investors in securities such as ADRs, whose values are affected by the currency of an underlying security, effectively assume currency risk.
